Components & Inventory Solutions

Over time, each airline operation generates a surplus inventory and requires material and components. Fleet changes, modification programs, and reduced usage rates are the primary factors influencing such inventory and components requirements. Excess parts gather dust on the shelves, generate handling costs and are non-working capital, while at aircraft maintenance induction, components requirements need to be addressed in time. Our team has been handling surplus inventories and components management for many years. With our structured approach, we ensure that dust-gathering assets turn quickly into cash and your aircraft receives everything it needs to get back to service.

Supply Chain & Inventory Solutions

Management Consulting

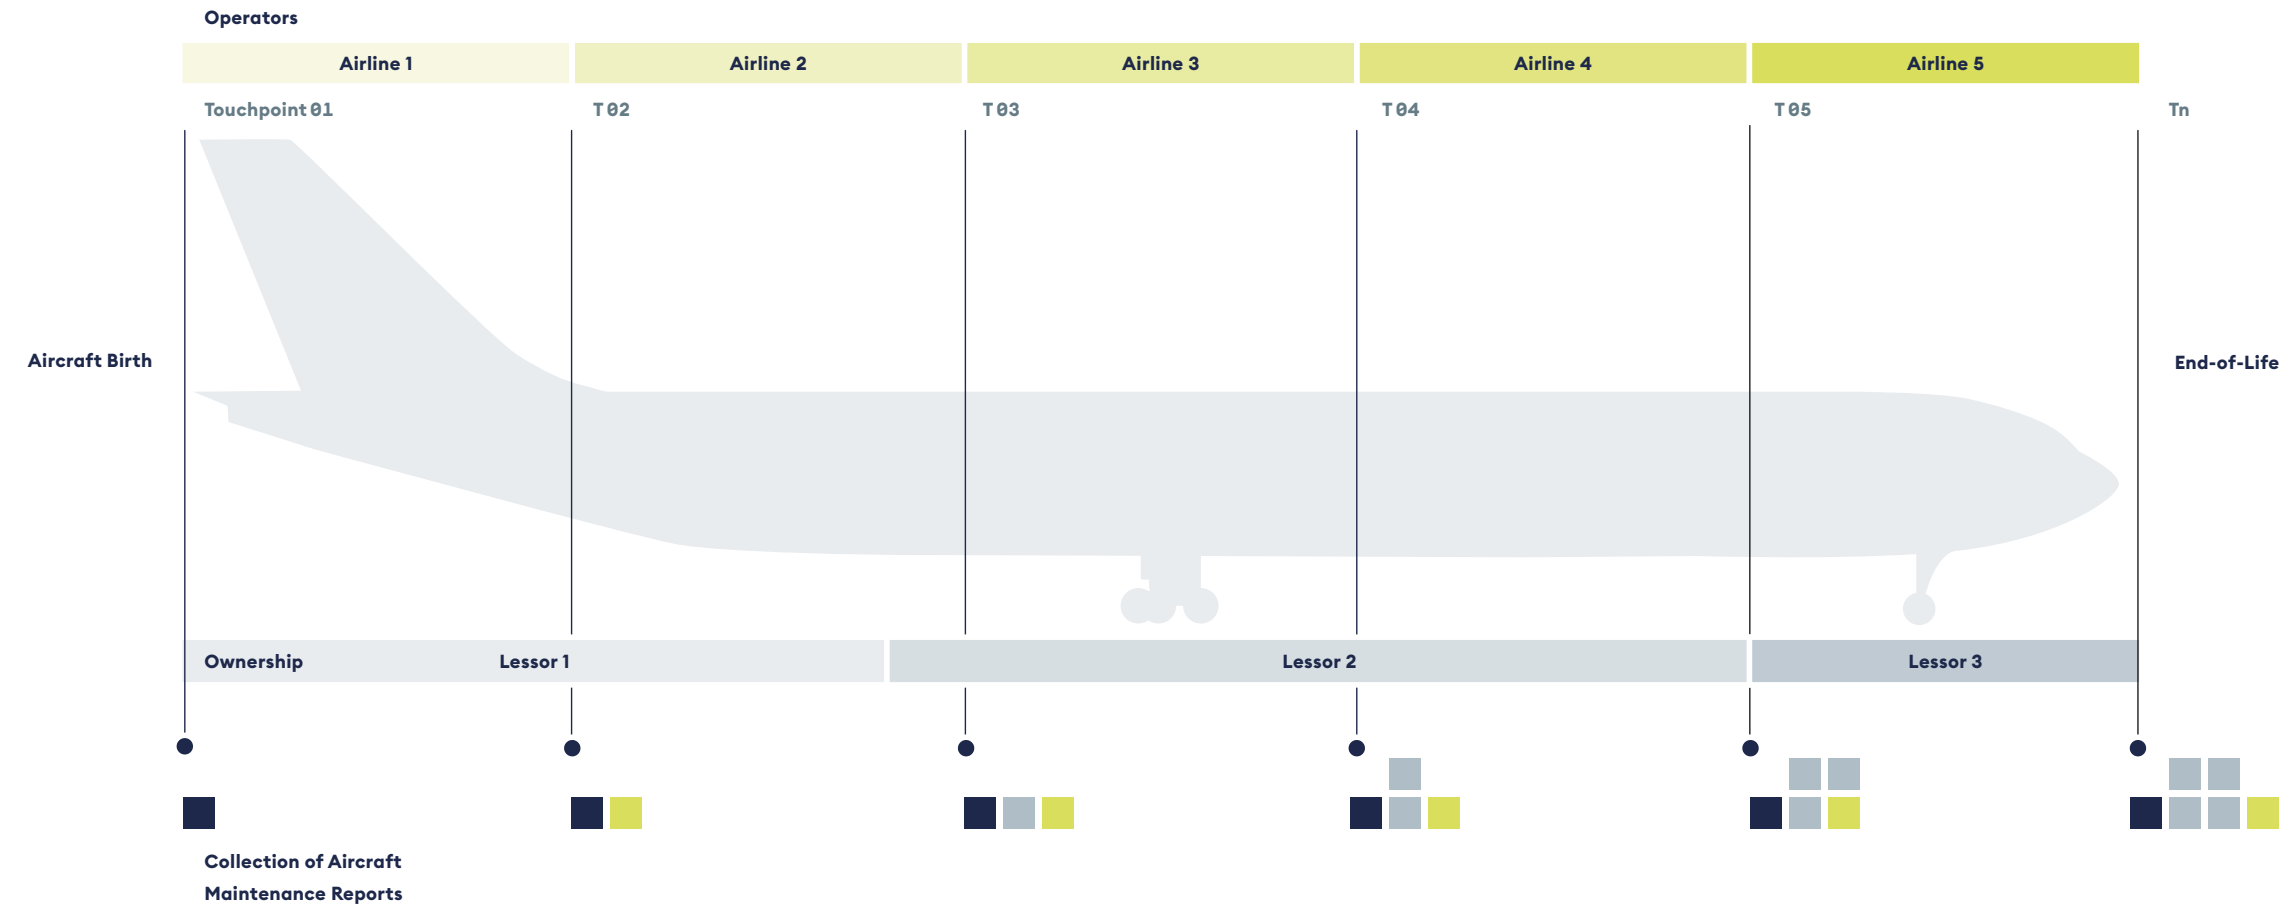

We have audited, re-structured and re-organized numerous airlines and MRO's, helping them create substantial long-term cost savings. Whether through an interim management solution or full-scale consulting project, we can provide a broad range of solutions by combining financial and technical driven know-how.

Our organization and brands

AMROS Global was founded in 2010 by former Swissair and SR Technics managers Eros Tavani, Marcel Hollenstein and Giovanni Renga, in the heart of Swiss aviation in Switzerland.

In the beginnings, AMROS Global started as an aircraft technical asset management company. Over the years, we have developed into a full scale advisory company offering custom-tailored solutions to the aviation Industry: From the final assembly line of aircraft to part-out to long-term re-organizations of airlines, we can provide solutions from an independent team of aviation experts.

AMROS Innovations was founded in 2020 to provide the aviation industry with innovation in IT development, operations, managing big data, incorporating progressive technologies like artificial intelligence (AI), and machine learning (ML) and Blockchain solutions.

AMROS Innovations has developed a state-of-the-art software solution for digital aircraft records management that enables airlines and lessors to efficiently manage aircraft records while keeping expenditures at a minimum.

AMROS Innovations will enable the aviation industry to finally gain access to industry 4.0 initiatives and solutions.

AMROS Asia is your regional contact point, enabling the Swiss sustainability and precision to be engaged within the APAC market. By integrating both of the best dynamics, together we develop best in class solutions for the local market.
